

"A beautiful, moving and thought-provoking documentary." – LISA HARDING (AUTHOR)

"Sticks with you long after watching." – LISA MANTHEI (INDY FILM FESTIVAL)

A GIRL CAN TOUCH THE SKY

It's about our future, not the past.

Ravinol Chambers sets off on an epic 1800km road trip down the west coast of India, in a convoy of 3-wheel Tuk-Tuks. He and his camera crew begin a treacherous journey that will eventually lead them to a girls' school in the rural village of Vrindavan, famous for its 5000 temples. The trip is to help raise funds for the school and for the team to try to understand the barriers girls face in relation to education.

At the school, each girl has her own story, how against all odds she has fought to pursue her education and to believe more is possible for her life than tradition and culture would otherwise dictate. The girls light up the screen with their endearing confidence. One of them, who wants to be an astronaut, earnestly says, 'A girl can touch the sky. A girl can do anything.'

The apparently opposing ideas of tradition and progress collide like two raging bulls in the conversations Ravinol has with people he meets on his travels.

Will education bring the girls true equality or simply transform them into caged butterflies?

How can we ensure lasting change?

Duration
1 x 82-minutes

Country of Production
UK, USA & India

Director
Ravinol Chambers

Producer
Ravin J. Ganatra

Be Inspired Films & Picnik Entertainment

RISHIKESH INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL
Best of Fest - WINNER

KANSAS CITY FILMFEST INTERNATIONAL
Official Selection

BARNES FILM FESTIVAL
Official Selection

JULIEN DUBUQUE INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL
Official Selection

